

Council passes by-law requiring landscapers to obtain city permits

BY ISAAC OLSON

Snow removal contractors and landscapers will now need a city-issued permit to work within Côte St. Luc and a new by-law amendment allows bulk, yard and construction waste to be deposited at Public Works for a fee.

Both of these measures, passing unanimously during the May 14 council meeting, were enacted by the council with the environment in mind as, proponents claim, both will help limit the amount of trash and debris on city streets. However, one local contractor says costly permits mean small businesses need to hike prices — something customers don't want.

Landscape/snow permits

Without permits, explained councillor Steven Erdelyi, snow, leaves and debris have been pushed into the street by contractors and caused safety problems. The new law will come into effect June 15, giving contractors roughly a month to get the needed permits.

When asked by a resident how the city plans to educate contractors and enforce the by-law, Mayor Anthony Housefather said the Public Works department will be spreading the word and “yes, it will be enforced.”

This is ridiculous: Landscaper

After 35 years of landscaping and removing snow in the surrounding area, Ernest Chapman takes issue with laws that demand permits because price competition is already fierce enough.

In turn, he said these types of rules give bigger contractors, who can afford to offer a lower price despite the cost of permits, one leg up on smaller businesses. He said these types of municipal laws force people out of the job and they put more strain on the welfare system.

Chapman, claiming he is always careful with snow and leaves, said he understands that some private snow removal contractors are negligent and should be getting permits, but the same could be said about the city's street operations that are often dumping snow right on freshly cleared driveways.

But when it comes to landscaping, he said “people are already complaining about the prices as it is.” Requiring permits in places like Hampstead, Westmount and Montreal West, he concluded, feels like “they're trying to put us out of business. This is ridiculous. I don't find this fair at all.”

Trash disposal

At the council meeting, Councillor Dida Berku said residents and contractors will be offered different fees to deposit waste at the Public Works yard but, she noted, people will be required to prove the trash was produced in the city.

With fees ranging from as little as $10 to as much as $90 depending on the waste, Berku said, “we feel this is going to generate approximately $40,000 to $50,000 a year. It's money that we need to cover the disposal of this waste and, also, it will encourage people to not just dump it on the street as it is not ordinary garbage.” Residents can also call the Public Works department, she noted, and, for a fee, pay to have waste collected.

“Along with the licensing of contractors, we're hoping to instill some discipline in Côte St. Luc and in the way yard waste and other waste materials are disposed of,” concluded Berku.

In the 20th century, our greatest cities were almost ruined by the automobile. The author argues that only a global revolution in transportation can bring them back from the brink.

He offers alternatives to car-based living, told through encounters with bicycle commuters, subway engineers, idealistic mayors and disillusioned trolley campaigners. In a world of skyrocketing gas prices and political unrest in the oil-rich corners of the world, this is essential reading.
